Summary OF MY PRESENTATION
Christian Education in the Context
Of the Cultural and Technological Revolution

In my intervention, I will focus my remarks on some of the fundamental resources of Christian thought that can provide light, even more produce meaning, on the problematic that holds our attention in our international conference. Briefly, at the heart of the cultural and technological revolution, Christian education is committed to take sides for the man of the Gospel. The technical, social, and even political challenges have a direct relationship with our faith. The church always speaks in the name of faith and its consequences on the truth of man. Knowing God and Knowing man are the very foundations of Christian anthropological thought. In the context of today's discussions, the task of Christian education invites to a new rethinking of a humanism open to transcendence.
