

“Science as a value system for a sustainable world”

The role of science for the future of humanity is discussed, drawing on the lessons learnt from the COVID-19 pandemic and taking as an example CERN, the European laboratory for particle physics.

In particular, the importance of open science, knowledge and education accessible to all, and collaboration across borders is highlighted.